

Photo portals and human energy

A pilot study with the Bio-Well device

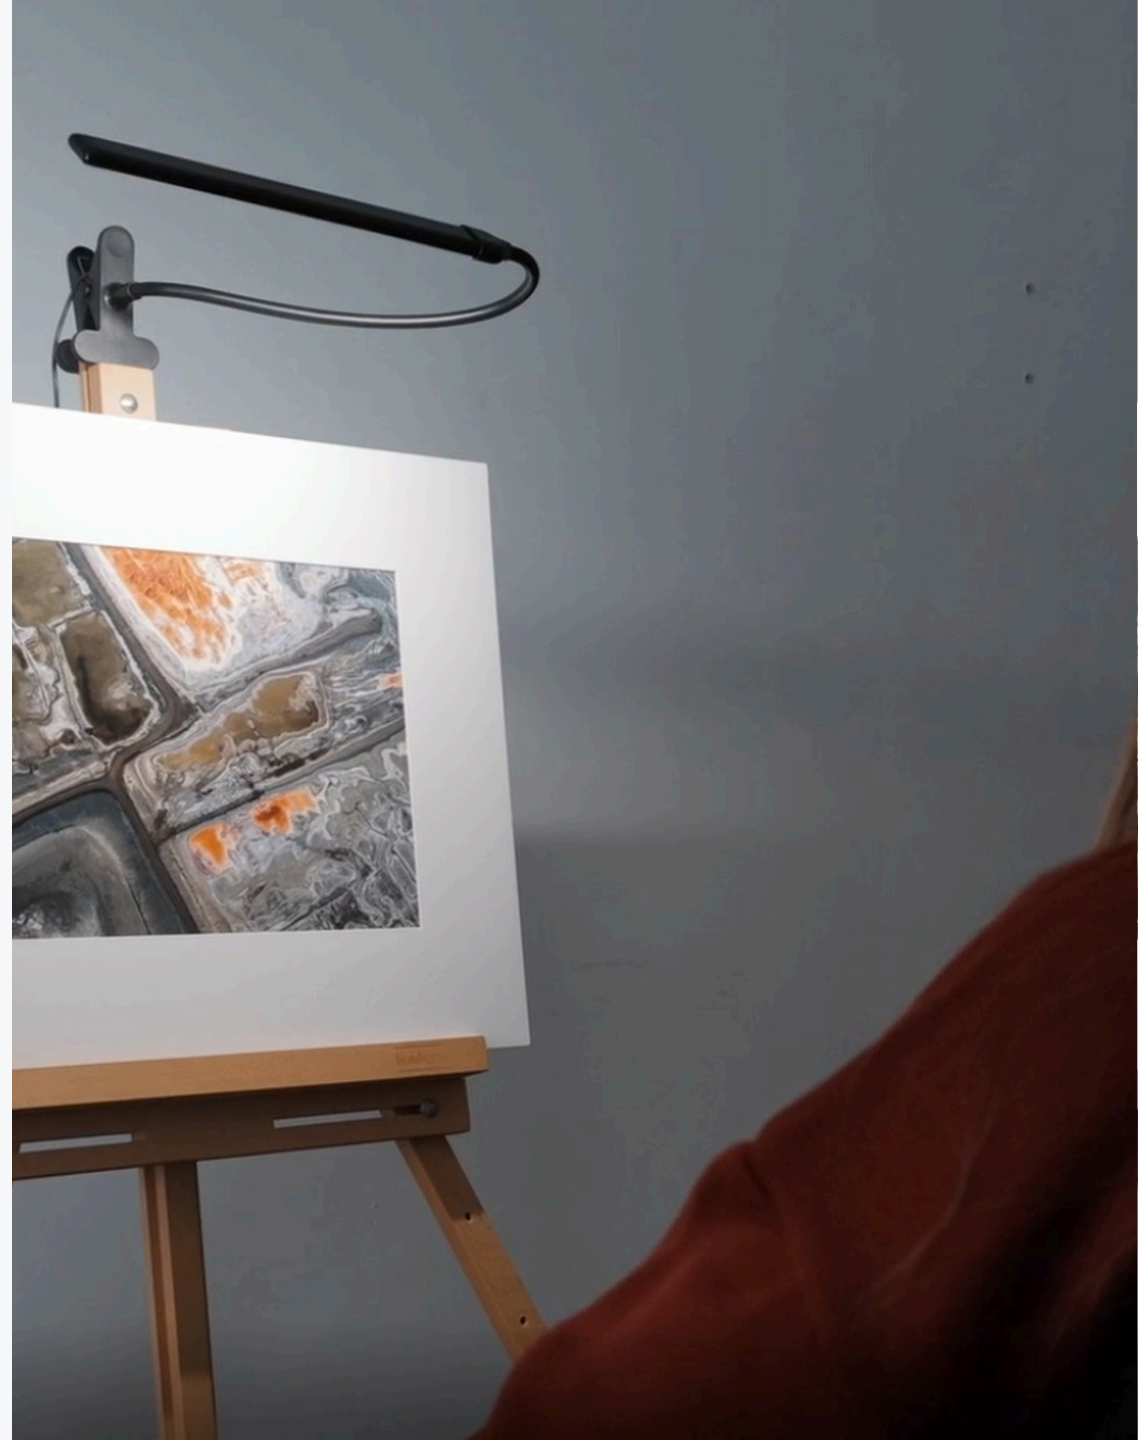

Moscow, 2026. 17 participants, four measurements each

Where it began

People who come up to photo portals often describe a physical response: goosebumps, warmth, tingling, trembling fingers. Sometimes you can even see it from the outside.

We wanted to find out whether this response shows up in the body's readings. So we chose the Bio-Well device and designed a measurement protocol.

How we measured

Bio-Well uses gas discharge visualization. The device captures the glow around each of the ten fingers, and the software uses it to calculate energy, stress and balance.

 Overall energy level

 Heart energy

 Stress and balance

We compared each participant with their own baseline, so every change is shown in percent.

Protocol: four measurements

01

Baseline

5 minutes of rest

A calm state, then two measurements of all ten fingers.

02

First contact

3-4 minutes

The participant chooses the photo portal that resonates most and simply looks at it.

03

Guided connection

15 minutes

The author's guided connection by voice, the same for all: a flight into the portal, its details, air, sounds, colour.

04

Interview

5 minutes

A conversation about the experience, then the final measurement.

Same room, device calibrated before each participant, clean dry hands without rings or watches, at least two hours after a meal.

77%

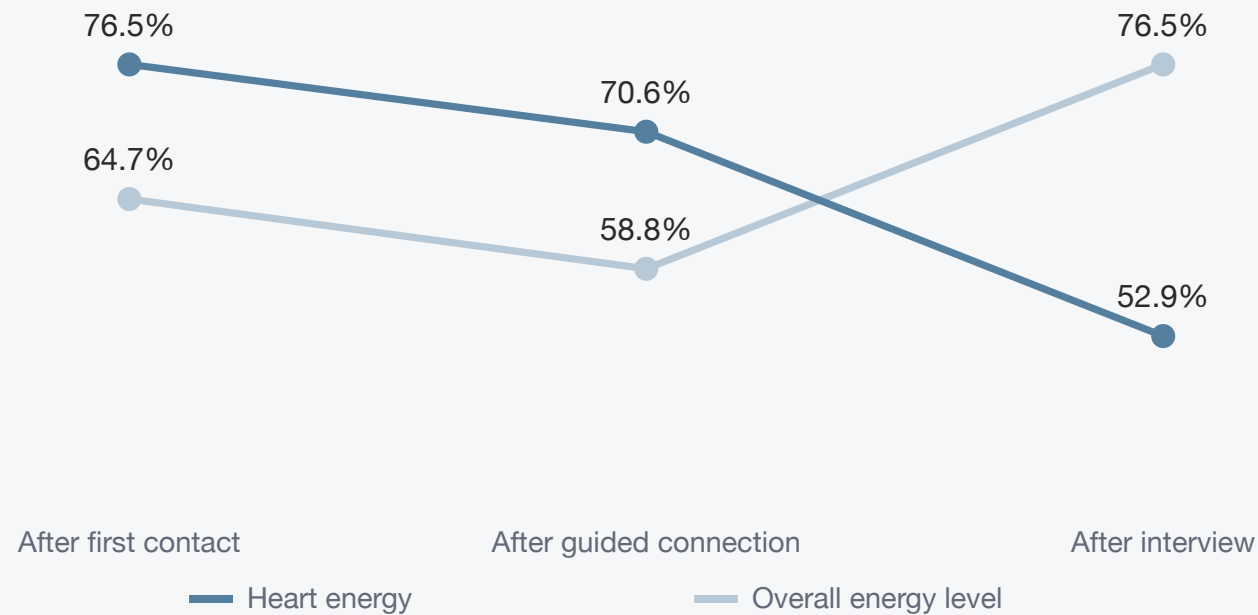

of participants: heart energy rose within the first minutes with a photo portal.

13 of 17 participants, measured with Bio-Well

The heart responds first

Share of participants with a reading above baseline

The heart opens first: heart energy rises right away in three quarters of participants. The overall energy level follows, and by the end of the study it is above baseline in three quarters as well.

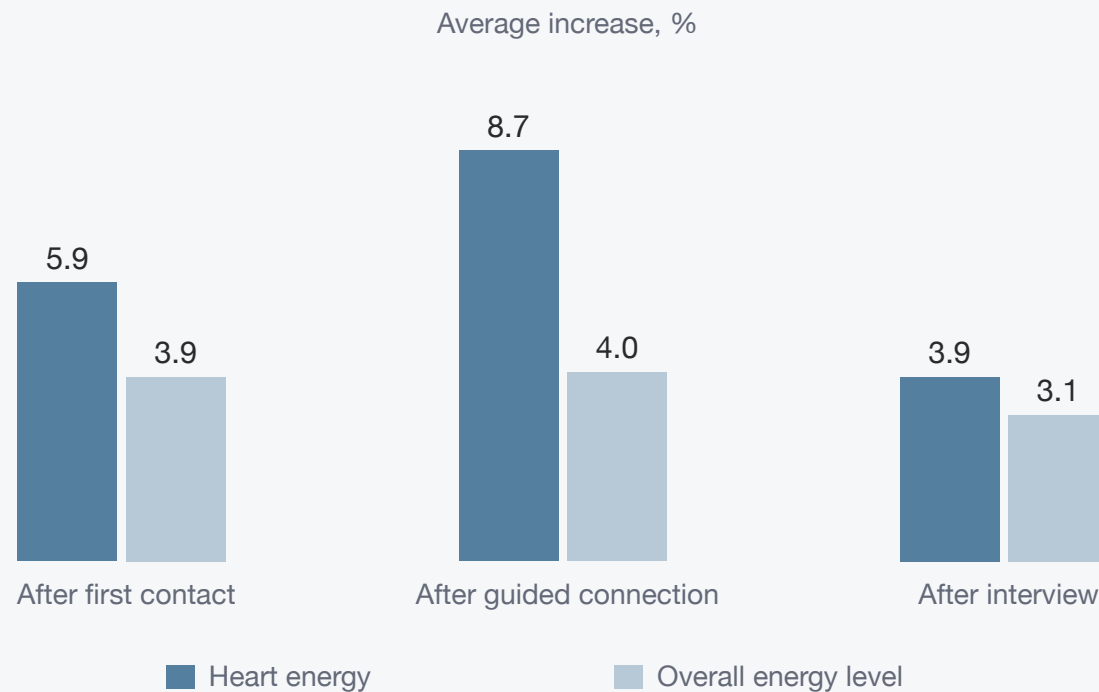

How much the readings rose

+5.9%

heart energy within the first minutes with a photo portal, with no words or instructions. After the guided connection +8.7%

+4%

overall energy level, already after the first contact. The voice barely changed it: +3.9% and +4.0%

Average rise among participants whose reading went up. Bio-Well data shows that a strong magnetic storm lowers the overall energy level by 4-5% on average. Here the shift is of the same size, only upward.

What else we noticed

The photo portal does the work

The guided connection barely changed the overall energy level:
+3.9% after the silent contact with a photo portal and +4.0% after it.

Stress goes down

In 60% of participants the stress level dropped noticeably.

Familiarity made no difference

About half of the participants saw photo portals for the first time. The response did not depend on whether they knew the works before.

Emotions and the device

Tears and strong emotions during the session did not directly match the device readings.

What comes next

This is a pilot study with 17 participants. We record the response and keep observing, and the next stages will include more people.

Next stage

30+

participants with the same protocol

Teleportation Session

pulse before and after five minutes with a photo portal, teleportal.art

